Before You Arrive

We recommend taking the steps outlined below before arriving at One Ocean Week Seattle (OOWS) 2026.

- Review the schedule and register for events: OOWS is a region-wide event, so programming may take place at different locations. Review the One Ocean Week Seattle 2026 Luma calendar for the latest event times, locations, and registration details before arriving.
- Check event access: Access varies across the week. The 2026 event calendar identifies exclusive policy sessions and private executive convenings in addition to broader programming, including some invitation-only gatherings. Check each event listing before making plans.
- Plan for multiple locations: Because OOWS takes place across Seattle, allow time to travel between events and confirm the location of each program you plan to attend. You can access an event location map here.
- Check the weather: Seattle weather can be variable in October, so check the forecast before heading out and come prepared for rain, particularly when traveling between venues or attending outdoor programming.

Getting Around

Review event locations on the OOWS event map, and allow time to travel between venues.

- Public transit options and information can be found in the City of Seattle Transit Guide.
- Private transit is available through rideshare apps, taxi companies and car rentals.
- Downloadable Seattle maps can be found here.
- For programming at Bell Harbor Conference Center, find location and parking information here.

For Reporters

Reporters can connect with Maritime Blue leaders, participating partners and international delegates before and during the event.

If you'd like to schedule a briefing or if you have any questions, please email Megan Nielson and Carley Gray at MaritimeBlue@communiquepr.com or call 206-282-4923.

Questions During the Week?

Because OOWS programming is hosted by Maritime Blue and participating partner organizations at multiple locations, attendees should refer to the individual event listing for event-specific questions or on-site guidance. The OOWS FAQ is also a helpful resource.
